- Coupons purchased via online shopping sites
- Coupons that appear to have been altered

Marsh reserves the right to ask customers for ID when accepting any internet coupons.

NOTE: There are a number of counterfeit coupons currently being circulated on the Internet. This is a criminal offense that can be investigated and prosecuted by federal, state or local law enforcement authorities. Penalties can be severe. Offenders will be identified and prosecuted.

Protect yourself; you should not purchase any auctions involving the transfer of electronic files or "unlimited", "Internet" or home printed coupons.

Be aware that the sale or auction of coupons can result in civil actions (i.e., a law suit).
